GENERAL WILLIAM A. QUARLES, the fame of the distinguished gentlethe fame of the distinguished gentleman whose name heads this article, as an orator, statesman and reasoner, it was furnished in his most powerful, brilliant and exhaustive speech at the Cheatham meeting on Saturday night last, which, in many respects, recalled the better days of Tennessee, when the citizen was made proud of the ability of men who commanded respect, admiration and confidence. The growd was the for application here. The mill is tion and confidence. The crowd was the largest, perhaps, which General Quaries ever addressed, and it listened to his speech with breathless attention. General Quaries's speech was calm, but the containing there are exactly sales to for application here. The mill is now in a flourishing condition. About three years ago stock was first taken in the enterprise and a company formed. The mill has been in operation now nearly a year. Here are the facts and the General Quarles's speech was calm, but energetic; dignified, eloquent and convincing, without the slightest discourtesy of language to any one. General Quarles came to Memphis with the reputation of a cultivated scholar, an effective speaker, and a logical debater of high order; but his speech on Saturday night exceeded the expectation of his friends, and he leaves our people impressed with the belief that he is one of the foremost men of the State. He speaks with great calmness, lays broad, the foremost men of the State. He speaks with great calmness, lays broad, deep and strong the foundations of his arguments, which, as he advances, rise like the pyramid, firm, compact and immovable. His facts were presented so clearly, and his conclusions were drawn from them in so masterly a manner, that conviction fastened upon the mind of every hearer. General Quarks held his audience spell-bound during arguments with great calmness, lays broad, of the concern may be calculated from the shirtings and sheetings turned out of this mill command a ready sale and higher figure than the same grade and style of goods manufactured in the East. SOUR GRAPES.

The fox, when, after a half day's laber, discovered it could not reach the grapes, pronounced them sour. For several days Andrew Johnson jumped for son, who was laid away to his final rest the nomination for Congress for the by his surviving comrades yesterday, State at Large. He reached out his has left behind him a widow and several bunch of grapes. But he found he could the first care of those whose friendship not reach the prize and he commenced a for the dead gentleman has sai furious crusade upon the convention wived his demise. Amongst other resolutions the committee reported one nominating Hon. Andrew Johnson for re-election, which was He Addresses a Large and Enthusia unanimously adopted. It will be seen that the convention which nominated General Johnson for Governor in 1855 Colored People Taking Interest in the was represented by only twenty-four counties, yet he ridicules the idea of supporting General Cheatham who was From a special corre nominated by one of the largest and most respectable conventions ever most energial and district, is making most energetic phisand affects. most respectable conventions ever most energetic abinand effects held in the State. Had General though the Crant Election; the Marshall, has body mechan Johnson been nominated in the place appointment him of General Cheatham, he would have accepted the nomination most greedily, and in every speech he would have held up his hands in boly horror at the idea of opposing the regular nominee. With surpassed, if anything, any offorts here. Many negross how little grace does this opposition to the convention that nominated General Cheatham come, when we remember that the convention that nominated Mr. Johnson for Governer in 1855 was composed of delegates representing only twenty-four counties in the State, less than one-half the number that nominated General Cheatham. The question before the Democrats of Tennessee is simply, shall the party surrender its organization? Shall it abandon its candiganization? Shall it abandon its candidate, regularly nominated by the convention of the party, and support an independent candidate, and thereby probably lose to the party six members, besides the Senate and House of Repre-
